

Wilson Reading System®

Student Reader

Two

FOURTH EDITION

Wilson Language Training Corporation

www.wilsonlanguage.com

The Moth with Pink Wings

Jill and Hank run up the bank of a hill to get a moth. It is a long run up the hill, and they should be quick if they want to have fun with this moth. The kids see that the moth has pink wings as it rushes by them. They would like to toss the moth into a can to show Mom and Dad.

At the top of the hill, the moth now sits on a rock. Hank has a red net, but he could not get this one moth in it. Then the moth zips to the path and hangs on a log to rest. Jill hops to the log, but she also could not get this moth.

Hank now asks, “How could we not get that moth?” Jill says, “It was as quick as a jet and we were not! Oh well, we did not get the moth with the pink wings, but we had lots of fun!”

For the Win

Tim and Ed had a ball, but the net on the shed had a big rip in it. They both asked Dad if he would fix the net. Dad was quick to get the net all set. Now, Tim and Ed can have fun!

Ed tosses the ball at the net and it hits the back of the rim with a bang, but the ball does not fall in. Then, Tim gets the ball and sinks it into the net. Could he be on his way to a win? Ed thinks, “Not yet,” and he does not let up.

Ed gets the ball and makes a dunk shot, then he hangs from the rim. When the ball gets back to Tim, Ed dashes to the left and yanks the ball from Tim. Then, Ed hits a long shot for the win!

Ed and Tim now sit to chat. Ed says, “Thanks Tim. How fun was that? We should now play ball a lot. Our shots with the ball do rank at the top!”

Jim's Bank Job

The sun was up at six a.m. and Jim was in bed. Ring! Ring!

Jim did think, "I should get up now, but I do not want to." He sank back into his bed. Then the bell rang like a gong and Jim got a kink in his neck. He was sad. Jim had a dull job at the bank for so long now and he did not think much of it. He was in a funk.

Jim had asked for a job with more of a kick, but that job had gone to Ming. Her work was good so it was not a shock that she was the pick.

Jim did think she was the top fit for the job as well, but Jim was fed up with his job rank and did not want to go. Yet, Jim had to hang on and could not quit his job. He had a lot of bills.

When the bell rang one more time, Jim shut it off. Then, he got up. He had a quick bath, then got his bag and mug. Now, he had to rush to the bus to get to his job. All in all, Jim did think that things would be well at the bank.

Bad Luck on the Bus

Meg and Hank get on a hot bus which chugs up the long hill like a tank. A red cab honks to pass, but the bus chugs on. A tall kid lets Meg sit, but Hank has to hang on to the wall so he will not fall. Then, the bus hangs a quick left, and all of Hank's things from the mall fall from his bags. Meg picks them up and Hank says, "Thanks."

As Meg and Hank get set, they hear "Pop!" "Bang!" The bus has hit a big chunk of rock in the road. Then, the bus hisses and sinks into a rut of muck.

Hank hangs on, but his back bangs into the wall of the bus and Meg gets a kink in her neck. It is not fun on this bus!

Hank and Meg get off to help fix the bus. Hank gets gunk on his cap and has to wet the rim to get it off. Hank then yells, “We should be all set now!” The bus sets off, but it dings and hisses all the way. Hank wishes that he did not get on this hunk of junk and adds, “We would all be well to chuck this bus into a big junk lot.” Both Hank and Meg think, “How could a bus link us to this much bad luck? We should have asked for a cab to pick us up!”

Beth's Trip in the Grass

Mom asked Beth to sit on the top step. Beth was in her best red dress and Mom did not want Beth to get up. When Mom left to get her bag, Beth got up fast. She slid off the steps. What did Beth do next? She ran in the grass, but her shoe hit a twig, which led to a big slip. Beth fell and got a cut on one of her legs.

Beth went back to the top step, stuck her chin in her hands, and wept. She could see that there was a big rip in her dress. She should not have gone for a run in the grass.

Mom was mad when she saw the rip in Beth's dress. She asked, "My, my, Beth, how could this be? Why did you get up?"

Beth had to tell Mom that her slip in the grass led to this mess. Mom had to fix the cut on Beth's leg, then try to stick a pin in the red dress. All was well in the end.

Brad and Sam at the Pond

Brad and Sam are pals who go to Dret Pond. It is a small pond next to a big hill. There is a shed by the tall grass with lots of stuff in it to use for a fun day on the pond. Sam got a raft from the shed so that they could make the best of this day off.

What did Brad and Sam do next? They could just let the raft cross the still pond. When a big gust of wind hit, they left the land in a flash.

Next, the plan was to rest and chat on the dock. The pals felt that they would melt in the hot sun. So, they went to the end of the dock to jump into the pond and chill off. A swim in the fresh pond was just the best.

As the sun set in the west, Brad and Sam could not help but grin. They were glad to have had this great day.

Who has the Best Lunch?

When the bell rings in class, Peg, Fred, and Hank jump up and run for the hall. The kids all have lunch bags held in their hands with a fist. Why would the bags be held with such a stiff grip? There are lunches in the bags!

Peg, Fred, and Hank all rush to sit in the best spot, which is on the bench. They are quick to check out their bags. Who will have the best lunch to munch?

Peg has lots of crab on a bun and a mint in her bag. Fred has chips and dip with a small box of milk. Now, these are not bad snacks, but could Hank have the best lunch here?

At last, Hank digs in his bag and gets out the best lunch of all. What does he have? There is a big thick roll with lots of ham, a cup of nuts, and plum punch!

Peg and Fred get a whiff of Hank's lunch and yell, "That is the best lunch of the bunch!" Does Hank plan to give them some to try? You bet!

Stan the Frog

Brad has a pet frog whom he calls Stan. Stan swims in the pond and hops on the grass. Stan is soft and fat from the moths he both hunts and traps.

Brad thinks that Stan has the best jump of all the frogs here in the pond. He brags to his pals that Stan could pass a jump test. Brad plans to help Stan jump as tall as a big stack of twigs. What can Brad do to help Stan get to the top? He prods Stan with a small stick. Then Brad yells, “Jump!”

When Stan jumps his best, Brad lets him rest on the black sand which is by the pond. Now, Stan is not up to the task for this drill today. He hops past the twigs to a spot where the grass is tall.

Stan hunts the bugs for a snack. Brad asks, “Why will you not jump for me?” Stan just licks his lips and tilts his head. Brad then drops his stick in the sand. He thinks he should let Stan have a long rest. He will try again the next day.

Set Up for the Band

Tom went to the club at six p.m. to set up the drums for his band. It should be such a fun task to set up for this gig, and Tom was glad to be of help.

When he got to the club, there were cans and trash everywhere. What a mess! Tom did think, “Who would drop all this trash and then just take off?”

Tom did not crab or fuss as this was his job, after all. Tom had to mop the dust and pick up the trash. Then, he had to toss all the cans in a bin by the back steps. Now, the spot for the band was not a mess. At last, Tom set up the drums to test them. He hit the drums with the sticks. Bang, bang! Smash!

When the rest of the band got to the club, they were glad to see that there was no mess left to pick up. They all did yell, “Thanks, Tom!” The band sang ten songs at the club and all who were there had the best time.

The Big Grass Job

Mr. Smith had a bad hip and could not cut his grass. The grass was long, so he had to call Ken. Mr. Smith said, “My grass is a mess here.” Then he asked, “Can you come by and help me now?”

When Ken got there, he could tell that he would have to trim the shrubs and cut the grass. The vast lot of grass and tall shrubs were big jobs, but Mr. Smith said that he had the cash for both.

Ken had to snip and clip the shrubs. He felt hot in the sun, and he got bit by a lot of bugs. Still, there was grass to cut next. Ken had a quick snack, then got back to the task.

At last, the grass was cut and the shrubs were all set. Mr. Smith was full of bliss. Ken's legs and back felt stiff, but he was glad when he got a lot of cash for the job.

The Prom

Glen had a plan to ask Liz to the prom. He felt that she was by far the best gal in the class. When he asked, Liz said yes! Liz was glad she could go to the prom with Glen.

What would it cost to rent a black tux? It must be a lot, but Glen had the cash and he did want to look his best. So did Liz, so she went to a posh dress shop at the mall. Her mom was there with her and they did end up with a pink dress.

A lot of kids in the class went to the prom. Glen was glad he could be with Liz. He did try not to brag, but he felt a big grin when he was there with her. At the prom, the kids had snacks and red punch.

The band was the best, but the last set came to an end. Glen and Liz were the last ones there. Glen would thank Liz for saying yes to the prom.

On the Track

By the end of class, Chaz is the one who is glad for the bell. Now he will rush to the track. Why? Chaz wants to be fast. In fact, he wants to be the champ!

To be the best at the 100 yd. dash would be a big task. He must do his drills and then run ten laps. He can not slack off at all. Off the block, Chaz shifts to his left leg and whisks off around the track. Chaz has grit, so he runs and runs. He does not fret that it is dusk and opts for one more dash.

When it gets to be six p.m., Chaz now pants and gasps with his drills. Still, he kicks his legs and has a grin on his lips. Chaz ends his drills here for now, but he gets how to win and knows what he must do. He does not want to be a sloth and come in last! He will be back to this track often to get to the top.

Sid is the Best Host

Sid was just a small child, but he was the best host. He was kind to the old man who had been in the den. When the old man sat, Sid put a bunch of chips and some dip in a dish for him to have a snack. Then Sid asked the man if he would want any punch or some cold pop.

Sid sat and had a long chat with the old man. Sid told him about his math class, “I can add and get many sums now. Can you add ten plus ten?” The man said with a grin, “In fact, I can.”

Then the old man asked the child to tell him about the kinds of books he had in his class. Sid told the old man all about this. Next, Sid asked the old man to read to him for a bit.

Sid's dad and mom were glad to see how Sid had become such a big kid and, most of all, the best host.

Jack and the Colt

It has been a while since Jack went to check on his new colt, Zest. His dad tells Jack that it is becoming cold, and Jack must find his gold vest and put it on. Then, Jack rushes to find the colt.

Jack thinks that Zest is the most fun when he runs as he sits on his back. He is black with a spot of tan on his chest. Zest is a bit bold and will kick his hind legs if he is mad at anyone.

Jack calls his small colt to come to him. He is wild and could bolt at any time. Yet, Zest does not kick or bolt when Jack is with him today. Jack thinks that the colt is becoming mild now.

The colt lets Jack brush him and give him a pat. Then, Jack holds up a gift for the colt - some fresh plums! Zest is fast to lick and gulp down the plums. It is cold, but Jack does not mind at all.

Get the Most Bass

Bob Smith asked Tom Finch to come to the pond and fish for bass. It was becoming cold but they both had big, black pelts to put on to block the wind.

Bob cast his rod with a flick of his hand. It had been no time at all when a small fish bit. Bob had to tug the rod to check for the fish, but when the rod was back on land, there was not anything on the end. The fish was gone! Bob did not mind as he set his rod to try again. When he cast his rod the next time, a bass bit with a jolt. The bass was wild, but Bob got it in at last.

When Tom cast his rod, he was quick to get a bass on the first try. Bob told him, “What luck! You should come here to fish all the time.” Tom cast his rod again and again and, in the end, he had the most fish. In fact, Tom got six bass, but Bob got just the one.

Tom told his host, Bob Smith, “Thanks. I had so much fun that I did not mind the cold. Now, we should fix up some fish for lunch!”

The Gift Slip Up PART ONE

Tom knew that he must bolt fast and get to the gift shop by six p.m. It had been his plan to stop back at the gift shop after work and pick up a small brass clock that the shop had put on hold for him. Yet, he had been in a rush all week and did slack off about the gift.

When Tom got to the shop, he could not find the brass clock on the shelf. In fact, he could not find any clocks at all! Tom asked the man at the shop, “Did you sell all your brass clocks?”

The man did become sad when he told Tom, “Yes, we had a rush on clocks and the staff sold all of them. We did hold one for you, but you did not call or come by to get it, so we sold that one too. We will get some boxes of clocks in next week. That is the best I can do.”

The Gift Slip Up PART TWO

Tom was now in some kind of bind. The fact that a truck would have boxes of clocks to the shop next week did not help Tom at all. He could not help but think, “How does a shop sell all their clocks?” Still, Tom could not sulk or rant about this. He had to find a gift now and quick!

The man told Tom, “There are many gifts on the shelf in the back and they do not cost too much. Would your dad want anything else? Come, let us take a look.” In the end, Tom did find many things that Dad would want.

He went on to pick a gold quill pen. The man in the shop sold the pen to Tom and then put it in a gift bag. When Dad got his gift, he was glad and told Tom, “Thanks, I will put this gold quill pen on my desk.”

At the Pond

Frank made a call to Ben and told him about the plan he had to swim at Flax Pond. Ben said he did want to come but asked if he could bring his dog, Skip. Frank said that it was always okay for Skip to come with them.

Frank met Ben at the pond for lunch and a swim. They had hot wings, chips, and some drinks. Then they sat on a small hill to rest. Ben's pet dog, Skip, went for a run in the wet grass. He was a fast dog. Ben had to stand up and dash off to chase Skip. Ben had to try not to slip on the wet grass, but he got a cramp in his leg and fell.

He hit the front of his chin on a big clump of branches. Not only did Ben bang his chin, he got a big cut on his lip that bled. Ben had to put a pad on the cut for a bit.

Then, it was time for a swim. Skip went into the pond with Ben and Frank. Frank had a ball to toss to Skip many times. Skip had fun as he swam with the ball.

Then, Ben's mom sent him a text. He told Frank, "I must go now, but we should come back to spend a day soon."

Glen and the Gull Have Lunch

Glen sits in the sand with his mom and dad. They have been there all day. Mom holds a bag out in front of Glen and he picks out a crisp, fat shrimp to eat. Then he sips some of his drink. Dad has clams to snack on while he squints in the sun. Glen thinks the clams smell like a skunk and he will not have any.

By a clump of plants, Glen spots a small gull coming into the wet sand. Glen dashes up to the gull to get a good look. Now, this gull just goes about his hunt for clams in the mud. Only when he finds a clam does the gull lift his wings and blast off.

Glen thinks, “That must be his lunch. Dad and gulls can have their clams, but I will stick to shrimp for my lunch!”

Brad's Bad Day

Brad fell in the slush by his front step and his bag was all wet. Brad did think that fall would be the last of his bad luck for now. He said he would try to go on and he kept his chin up on the way to the bus stop.

Brad then had to rush to get the bus and he cut his leg on a branch. Now he had to run with a limp just to get there in time. When the bus went past his stop, Brad said, "What is going on?" He then had to call a cab and stand in the brisk, cold wind. The cab did not come for a long time. It got lost on its way to get Brad. At last, Brad got to his job at the shop where he sold prints.

At the shop, Brad did not sell any prints. He did help a gal, but she did not get her cash out to spend and Brad felt grim. The day did drag. How long could Brad's bad luck last?

At last, Brad's shift came to an end, and he went to get the bus. If only he could have a swift trip back home! But, his bad luck did not end. As the bus was about to come to the last stop, it got a flat when it ran into a trench of mud! Brad had such a bad day and felt that a spell was cast on him. The next day had to be better.

The Draft

The day of the big draft was coming fast. Dell had been put at the top of the ranks at the try out. He was sure to be out in front for this draft. His runs were swift and his jumps were long. His lifts were the best as well. There was not anyone who could crush his stats. The team staff said that they did want a jock with his skills.

In the class of picks for the one spot on the team, Dell had big wishes that he would get the call. Yet, he was putting this all out of his mind for now. It was all up to the team staff. There was not anything he could do but be on hold.

Then the call came and Dell had to lift his phone quick when it rang to check if it was a prank. It was not! The call was not just from anyone. It was from the team and they did pick him and only him. Dell had to grasp the news fast. Then he ran off to tell his mom, dad, and all his pals.

Big Bass

In the spring, Tim and Frank went to the pond. They each had a rod. Tim said, “We must get a big bass!” He told Frank to get a raft.

As Frank got the raft, Tim got a pan of grubs. Frank and Tim got on the raft with the pan of grubs. Then they went past some shrubs and twigs on the bank to the best spot to fish.

In a flash, Frank got a bass on his rod! It was very big, but he was strong. He got it on the raft and it made a big splash. He was glad and did brag all day.

The Best Gram and Gramps in the World

Pam and Bob had six kids. They both had a day off from work, so they put a call into Gram and Gramps to ask them to spend the day with the kids. Pam said that she must have a day with no stress!

Gram and Gramps were glad to have been asked to help out. So, they sprang into their van and went to pick up the kids to go to the mall.

Gram and Gramps spent a lot of cash on gifts and crafts. They did not scrimp at all.

Everyone had a big lunch, but Gramps had too much fish and got bad cramps. They left the mall so Gramps could rest in his bed. The kids did their crafts and in the midst of all this fun, they did not become sad or miss their mom and dad.

What did Pam and Bob do with their day off? They had brunch and went for a long walk. When they went to get the kids at the end of the day, the kids asked, “Can we do this every day? We had a blast!”

The Spring Job

Clint is not glad about the gust of hot wind. Spring is coming! Most everyone in the world feels bliss when the sun lasts long into dusk. Yet, Clint could not help but think of all the yard work. When all the cold and frost ends, the land and grass would be a mess.

Each spring Clint has to trim the shrubs and fix up the mulch bed. Spring has sprung, so his tasks are at hand. Black mold masks the shed. Clint finds sticks and globs of rank sod everywhere. Clint is very strong, but this is too much stress and filth!

In his mind, Clint tempts himself with a snack and a nap, but he must go on. He scrubs the swing and the two benches by the elm. Then he sets two pots on the front steps. He plants the bulbs one by one, then splashes them with water.

When everything is fresh, Clint grasps that he should not be such a grump. He lugs the trash out back and sprints to have a bath and grill some lunch.

Help from Chan

Trent has some stress about Mrs. Beck's class in school. It was not that she was strict or that it was too much work. But, it was each and every fact that did tend to trip him up. Also, the text for the class was two inches thick! Everything felt as if it were a trick and he did not know what to do next.

Trent was prompt for class. One day, he asked his pal, Chan, for help. He told her that he was in a slump with this class and had to pass. Chan had a top rank with an A in Mrs. Beck's class. How in the world did she do it? Could Trent do it too?

Chan was most glad to help out Trent. It would not be too much work. She told Trent that everything would be okay and that he must not dwell in the past.

Chan and Trent met every week to check their work for class. Trent just had to split the bulk of his work into small chunks of text. That's what Chan had been doing to hold her grade up so strong. If only Trent had this skill last fall! Now he was on his way. It would be grand if Trent got an A in this class by spring!