

Wilson Reading System®

Student Reader Five

FOURTH EDITION

Wilson Language Training Corporation

www.wilsonlanguage.com

Wade's First Ride in the Sky

Wade has thought about this trip for over a year. It will be his first time on a jet plane! Mom, Dad, and Wade are done packing their bags, and now it is time to go.

On the way, Wade asks, "How big is the jet?"

Mom and Dad say, "It's a great big plane, and you are going to have a grand time in the sky."

They pull up to the drop-off lane and get several bags from the back of the van. Dad drives off to put the van in a different lot. He will meet them at the gate. People are rushing around everywhere! Mom has to unzip her handbag to find their two plane tickets. She gives the tickets to the tall man working at the front of the line.

When at the gate, Mom and Wade rest until Dad comes. Then, Mom says, “We ought to get in line. It’s just about time to go!” All three of them walk down the long ramp to the plane. Before long, they will take off and be in the sky at last! Wade will then have to think about what new thing he can try next!

An Acting Class for Maxim

Maxim is only in the fourth grade, but someday he wants the world to admire him. He is not a shy kid, and he wants to learn how to act! Maxim's dad thinks he ought to give acting a try and gets him acting lessons with Miss Flo. It is important to work with a pro and be instructed about the many different acting methods. Miss Flo will help him become a star!

Maxim works fast to finish his chores and math problems for the next day. He wants to get to this new acting class on time. The address is only four blocks away, and the sky is full of sun, so it will be good to walk there.

Maxim and his dad walk together at a quick rate. They make it with time to spare. Once inside, Maxim checks in for the class. He looks around, and there are three other kids who will be attending the class with him. Maxim wonders if they have done this before. Then, Miss Flo calls everyone into class. Maxim hugs his dad and rushes off to try his very first acting class.

Jade's Hidden Job

Jade was a whiz before she was four years old. She went on to be at the top of her class. So, it's no shock that she now has a fantastic job. Jade travels around the world and is seldom home. She is on the go every month or so. When you ask her what she does for work, Jade is hush-hush.

We all try to think, “What could it be?” Between all of us, we try to probe, but in the end, Jade is not moved to tell us what she does. She has a lot of distrust and says she ought to hide the facts about her job. However, one day, the ever so sly Jade gives me several hints. She tells me that her work involves these three things: wise tactics, vanishing acts, and ending crime. Now, how do you suppose Jade spends her time?

There is no dispute that Jade is a pro in her role, and I have a wild guess as to what she does! I suspect
Jade is a spy! What do you think?

Jake's Plan for Great Food PART ONE

Jake is the first one up, and he has plans to make food for everyone in the house. He moves down the hall with a soft step so he does not wake anyone. He bought all the fixings the day before and was sly about putting the things away while no one was looking. He hopes to please his wife and four kids with this small act of goodwill.

Jake thinks, "I ought to take great care and try not to make a sound. This is no time to be quick and spry and risk a wake up."

As Jake is about to pry out the pots and pans without a bang or thump, his four-year-old child, Montel, comes in and says, "Hi!" He gives his dad quite a scare.

Jake says, “Oh my! I did not intend to wake you.”

Montel asks, “Why?”

“Because I had hopes to please all of you with some great food,” says Jake. “Now that you are up, would you like to help me?”

Jake's Plan for Great Food PART TWO

Montel is glad to assist his dad. They conspire to get everything done before Mom and the rest of the kids wake up. They fry up some eggs and make a tall stack of pancakes. While the stove is still hot, Jake mixes up some hash in a skillet. Then, Montel sets the plates out and puts piles of napkins between them. Jake chops up several different kinds of plums and puts them on a big plate with some red grapes.

Montel asks, "Is it time to wake everyone up?"

"Yes," Jake says. "Let's get the rest of the clan to come down and find these eggs and pancakes!"

Mom and the other three kids are in shock when they see what Jake and Montel have been up to. They all sit and dig in. The food tastes great, and Jake thanks Montel for his part in pulling it all off.

A Move to the States

Bruno is from the Azores in the mid-Atlantic. He sold his house there and moved to the States back in June. He always wanted to open his own bake shop. So, that's just what he did!

Bruno and his wife, Irene, wake up each day before sunrise to prepare. They begin to make their jumbo bagels and pecan donuts before the sun is up. They learned to bake back home on the volcanic landscape of the Azores.

Before Bruno lets the public into the bake shop, he sets a menu on top of a stand, and he puts a vase of fresh lilacs next to them.

As people walk toward the front door of the bake shop, Bruno is polite and always gives them a wide smile. He likes to chat with everyone as he hands them a menu.

All of the items they bake are a hit! However, by the end of the day, Bruno is spent. He sits on the front deck of the bake shop to relax. Bruno plays music from the Azores and thinks about his new life in the States. His heart is full of pride when he thinks about all the old customs from the Azores that he can now share with his new friends.

The Attic Mess PART ONE

Mike brought his plate to the sink. Then, he asked his mom if he could go to the basketball game at seven o'clock. "That depends on your dad," she responded, "He will be home at six, and I recall that he requested your help in the attic. He could restrict you from going."

Mike learned that this was no joke. He felt his heart sink as he assisted his mom with the rest of the dishes. He did so wish to go to the game!

When Mike's dad came in the house, Mike ran to ask him about going to the game. But, his dad was quick to declare, "Mike, I know you desire to go have some fun, but let me remind you about the attic. It's a great spot to hang out with your friends, however, you have been inattentive by not picking up after yourselves."

And now, you have to own that mess! You can go to the game the moment you finish, but I insist that you complete this chore with me first.”

Mike spun around to detect the time on the clock. Would he ever make it to the game?

The Attic Mess PART TWO

Mike was very upset, but he could not debate this or resist the facts. He did regret that he had left the mess! He would miss the pregame fun, but he knew in his heart that he was to blame for the mess in the attic.

Mike took on the job and first moved all the waste into a trash can. He then had to scrub the closet shelf. The final item to address was fixing a crack between two steps.

Mike had to admit that his dad stuck around to help him, and it was good for the two of them to spend some time together, even if it was work.

At last, the job was complete. How would Mike's dad react? Well, he was pleased and told Mike that the attic was now in good shape. Mike had learned a good lesson about respecting the house rules. Next, he ran off toward the basketball game professing, "I am not going to trash the attic ever again!"

Ivan Behaves at the Debate PART ONE

The students in Mrs. Russell's debate class had to prepare for an important visit next month. They would write a profile for each of the men and women from Congress who had been enlisted to discuss the problems in their state.

Ivan was often the most vocal about his thoughts in class, and he did not always stop himself when he should. Mrs. Russell told him that she expected him to be silent when the guests began to talk and debate. Ivan consented to behave because he knew inside that Mrs. Russell was right. It would not be polite to begin a blatant protest at this event.

Everyone wanted to learn about the plans of the men and women from Congress. So, each student began to draft the profiles, inspecting each and every fact the guests would present. They were intent on making Mrs. Russell swell with pride.

Ivan Behaves at the Debate PART TWO

The debate came at last, and Mrs. Russell's class was prompt and set to attend. The contest began and the class was silent. Ivan felt conflict in his own heart with some of what was said, but he was not rude. He knew to hold his comments and save them for the end when it was time to inquire of the panel.

Each man and woman from Congress presented different plans to address topics such as no water, toxic waste, safe walkways, and a new work program. Then, they went on to defend their motives.

At the end of the debate, the kids had time to address the congressmen and congresswomen and Ivan did his best to not be brazen.

The entire talk went on for more than four hours. Ivan and his class were pleased with the uplifting event and felt that they had learned a lot. Ivan held to his pact with Mrs. Russell who said this to him, “Ivan, you did a fine job at this debate. I am so glad! You kept your focus and spoke so well. You get an A for the day!”

The Stucco Home PART ONE

April went for a long drive. She was lost, but she did not care. She went down a small lane set between thick elms. At the end, there was an old stucco home for sale. April got out to inspect the house and its tranquil spot. The stucco dwelling sat at the top of a hill with a stone walk and steps. She felt like this house had been made for her!

That evening, April told her husband, Tyrone, about the old stucco home. He knew he could predict the cost - expensive! Still, he said he thought that the prospect could be good, and he would be pleased to inquire about it with her. They had been renting a house for so long. Now it was time they bought their own place!

April made the call to the estate selling the house, and they set up a time to go check it out. April and Tyrone felt the thrill of becoming home owners, but did try not to get their hopes up. As they drove down the lane toward the house, Tyrone felt very much the same way his wife felt. He fell in love with the remote spot and was enchanted by the attractive old home.

The Stucco Home PART TWO

Inside the house, April and Tyrone were in a daze. They learned that the inside of the home had been neglected, but they knew they could revive it. One could expect to run into several problems throughout an old home like this, however, the stucco on the outside was in great shape and it did hide what was on the inside. They learned that the time-tested finish may just need a quick sanding and dusting and then they could focus on the inside fixes.

At last, Tyrone felt brave enough to inquire about the cost. On the basis that this place would require a lot of work and updates, the number was not way off-base. It was, in effect, a modest cost for the size of the home and plot of land.

Tyrone and April were ecstatic! Most of the time, they were not rash people. However, this time they opted to move fast and make a bid. They knew in their hearts that this stucco home on a hill was made just for them.

The Pony Ride

Sally is five years old, and she has always wanted to go on a pony ride. She has made this request many times. At last, her dad comes into the house and asks, “Sally, don’t you think we ought to go on that pony ride today? Let’s go now!”

Dad, Mom, and Sally drive twelve miles until they find the big ranch owned by Mrs. Holly. The land is wide, and there is a tall windmill just past the chicken shed.

The three walk over to the pen to stare at the beautiful pony. However, Sally does not get too close. She hides behind her dad and acts in a shy way. It takes her some time to learn that it is safe to be next to the tiny pony whose name is Benny.

When the woman swings the gate open, Sally gives Benny a big hug and small pat on his mane. After a quick lesson to prepare, Sally gets on the pony and yells, “He is so pretty!” Sally looks around the ranch and spots rabbits, ducks, hens, and a jumbo pig. She is a very happy person on top of this strong pony.

When it is time to go, Sally thanks the ranch lady, Mrs. Holly, and hopes to come back to ride Benny again.

Ruby, the Red Bulldog

Ruby is a wild and crazy dog. She has folds of skin above her nose and hanging from her neck. Ruby also has an underbite, but her owner, Peggy, thinks she is beautiful just the same. Ruby likes to lick Peggy's legs when she gets home from work. Then, the reddish dog is happy to take a quick nap and snore in her fluffy bed.

Peggy brought Ruby to her home two years ago when Ruby was just a puppy. She was a tiny thing then, but now Ruby is a pretty big dog. She likes to munch on her dog food until her belly is full. Before it's time to go to bed for the night, Peggy takes Ruby outside to go for a run in the grass. Peggy sits and flips through a small part of her book. This part of the day is fun for Ruby. She gets to chase a chipmunk or bunny until dusk.

Peggy thinks that Ruby sometimes acts more like a person than a dog. Ruby walks around the house with a strut in her step, then zips out onto the deck and jumps up on the hammock. This funny move makes Peggy smile every time! Life without Ruby would surely be a lonesome one, and Peggy thinks, “I would be a sad woman if Ruby was not here!”

Libby Makes Grape Jelly

Libby is on a visit with Granny at her small log cabin. The cabin is just the right size for one person. Libby thinks it is cozy. Granny has a big, beautiful vase of holly on the desk and a dish of ruby red taffy. The cabin is so pretty and tidy that Libby likes visiting as often as she can. Mom and Dad just drop her off and then go to shop for the day.

Today, Granny will help Libby learn to make grape jelly. If it comes out right, Libby will take a bunch home for her mom and dad. Granny puts the plump grapes in a big pot with sugar and a cup of water. She puts the pot on the stove for ten minutes until everything gets very hot.

Granny has Libby take out the leftover chunks of grapes and put them in the trash. They don't go into the final product. The liquid that is left is put on the stove again until it turns thick. Libby puts this thick grape jelly into small crocks and shuts them with a lid.

At last, it is time for Granny and Libby to put their grape jelly on some muffins and bagels. It tastes so good! Mom and Dad will be pleased to get the crocks of grape jelly.

The Jolly Menu

Jimmy had a long day at work. He drove home at four o'clock p.m. with plans to fix something to dine on. His mind had been set on the chicken he bought at the store. However, when he got to his house, he learned that the chicken was still frozen! He had not defrosted it and he thought, "I don't have time for it to become soft!" He would have to rethink his plan and opt for something else. Jimmy was a person who could solve any problem.

So, he went into the pantry to look around. Then, he did recall that he had plenty of duck left over from the evening before when his wife made their dinner. It would be sad to waste it. Jimmy did not wish to have the same exact thing, so he used jelly and cloves to make a gravy to go with the duck. He then made a kale and fennel salad.

Jimmy's wife, Meg, came home just after dusk. He told her that everything was just about done, and he asked her to put the plates in place.

The menu was not the best. The salad had a funny taste, and the gravy was full of lumps! Still, Meg was happy to have a pretty full belly, and she thought the dish was not so bad. She made jokes with Jimmy to try to console him and stop his sulking. He did not find everything to be so jolly, but he could never resist Meg's wit and beautiful smile. Jimmy and Meg ended their menu with some pastry and a good chat.

Brody's Job at the Golf Club

Brody just got a job as a caddy at a beautiful golf club. Brody likes the job and is happy there most of the time. A lot of lucky men and women belong to the golf club, and most of them are kind and tip Brody very well.

Brody is often the caddy for Mr. Shelby. Mr. Shelby has plenty of nifty clothes that Brody thinks must cost a pretty penny. Brody also thinks that Mr. Shelby is a silly man. He makes odd comments that don't make much sense, but his chitchat makes things kind of fun.

Mr. Shelby also has a best crony. His name is Mr. Henry, and both men say that golf is their top hobby. They are always at the club swinging at balls until sunset.

Mr. Shelby is pretty shoddy at the game, but Mr. Henry is a person who is quite talented at golf. He makes some tricky putts, and Brody admires his skills.

After a long day, Brody goes up to the loft in the golf shack. It is a bit buggy and musty, but he does not mind. It is a good time to rest, relax, and just be lazy. Being a caddy for two men like Mr. Shelby and Mr. Henry is great, but it tires Brody out!

Abby's Brave Day PART ONE

The hillside wildfires are now developing into a big risk for the homeowners of the local district. Mothers, fathers, sons, and daughters have all been told to exit their homes and find a safe place away from the destructive event.

But not Abby. In the firetruck, Abby makes her way toward the unprotected homes close to the hillside. Abby is part of a unit of twenty-five firemen and firewomen, and they are never off-duty. It is their job to ensure that all the occupants relocate to a secure spot. It is sad to have to dislocate all these people, but there is too much at stake not to move them.

Abby and her unit will check each and every home. They are intent on checking all twenty-nine homes on the block. They must readjust their equipment when the hot flames shift with the winds. It is work with a ton of risk, but Abby has always been a brave person.

Abby's Brave Day PART TWO

As the flames extend past the hills, the fire unit progresses to one home after another. At the sixth house, Abby walks around and checks the back of the home. All of a sudden, she detects a soft cry from under the deck. She looks and finds out that the cry is coming from a cat. In fact, Abby spots not just one cat, but a mother cat and five kittens!

The protective mother cat has been calling for help, but she has the good sense to hide and care for her kittens. The mother cat has a tag around her neck, and Abby finds that her name is Ladybug. Abby had not expected to save a nonhuman on this day, but she knows that all life is important.

Abby inches her way under the deck, attentive to the fact that Ladybug may not respond well to her help. One by one, Abby puts the mother cat and all the kittens into her bag and sprints off to the firetruck. She has to readjust the strap on her bag more than once as she runs.

Abby makes it to the firetruck. She deposits the bag into the back of the truck, unzips it, and lets the cats out. She tells Ladybug that she has been the best mother to protect these small kittens. Abby gives all the cats some water, then tells them, “Don’t be unhappy. We will reconnect you with your owners, but for now, you will be safe in here.” Away from the wildfire, Ladybug and all the kitten brothers and sisters can relax now.

A Chicken in the Bathtub PART ONE

Russ and Glen had been friends for a long time. One day Russ told Glen that he had a new pet. Glen asked Russ if it was a dog or cat. After all, those are the pets that most people own. However, Russ told Glen that his new pet was a beautiful chicken! Her name was Polly.

The next day, Glen asked Russ if he could come by to visit with Polly, the chicken. Russ was glad to have Glen come over, but when Glen got there, Polly was gone! Russ's brother had left the gate open, and now Russ was in a panic looking for the missing pet. With help from Russ's mother and father, the two friends spent the next two hours looking for Polly. Russ could not comprehend why this chicken would misbehave like this!

They inspected all the land by Russ's house. Polly was not behind the big pile of sticks. She was not behind a ton of stone by the small pond. They even went through every inch of Russ's tri-level home. Russ and Glen called and called, but Polly did not respond.

As dusk came, Glen knew he had to go home. He told Russ he could recommit to the hunt the next day. Glen began to walk away but not before he told Russ, "Good luck!"

A Chicken in the Bathtub PART TWO

Just as Glen made it to the front steps of his house, he saw the flap of a white wing behind a shrub and said to himself, “What was that?” Glen ran to the shrub and there he found a chicken looking sad and lost. Glen thought, “Could this be Russ’s chicken, Polly? It must be!”

Glen had to move fast to grab the chicken. Once he had a good grasp, Glen ran into the house. He knew he had to call Russ right away, but where could he put this clucking ball of fluff?

Glen did not want the chicken to get away again. He deposited her in the bathtub so he could make the call to Russ. Just then, Glen’s mother came home from work. In an instant, she detected the clucking and asked, “What is that sound?”

Glen told her, “Mom, don’t be unhappy, but there is a chicken in the bathtub. We will have to babysit this chicken until we find her owner.”

Glen’s mother could not help but grin when she said, “Son, wait until I tell your father about this!”

Glen made the call to Russ to tell him what was going on. Russ was there fast, and the moment he saw the chicken, he knew it was Polly. Then he said to Glen, “Thank you for finding this silly chicken. I will relocate her back to my home now and reattach the lock on the gate. It looks like she wanted to come visit you first!”

The Explosive Volcano

The siren blasted at four a.m. All those native to the remote land had expected it - the destructive volcano had erupted! Gases and molten rocks shot through the volcano's opening and were sent into the sky like rockets. A ton of hot ash was deposited everywhere. This could cause a rockfall and then a massive mudslide. The sound of cracks developing and the hissing of volcanic gas could be detected by occupants of distant homes.

A plan had been made for everyone to vacate their homes, and now there was no time left to prepare. They had all learned that this would be a crisis for anyone inhabiting a twenty-mile span. Every man, woman, and child had to be swift to respond.

Despite the plan for a safe escape, many people did not want to exit their homes. The thought of an active volcano leveling a home was too much to take. However, they had to escape the hot, explosive volcano right away to save their lives. Mothers, fathers, daughters, and sons had to move fast. There was no time to spare, and they ran to safety!

The Diminishing Sales Problem PART ONE

Kenny and his daughter, April, had been working in the trucking industry for a long time. Their lot held more than fifty cranes, trucks, and several kinds of wagons and vans.

People could come in to set up a contract if they wanted to rent or acquire these items. Over the past year, things had been going downhill and there was a drop in sales. April and her father had neglected to uphold the important components of the working environment.

The use of their trucks was not documented, and many cranes were busted and unsafe. A ton of spare parts were missing, and no one would own up to the theft.

The staff was in grave conflict over the developing problems. Some men and women even quit!

Kenny and April knew they had to refocus and resolve to fix the grim status of their truck shop. The two bosses made a plan to be open-minded and address the mess that now existed.

The Diminishing Sales Problem PART TWO

April's father began the task of helping the twenty-three-person staff commit to enriching their jobs. He spent time working to rehire those who had left.

Kenny was a dynamic person, and he won over their hearts in an instant. The staff was cohesive once more!

Kenny's daughter spent time developing ways to reinvent their sales methods. She put into place a comprehensive mode to calculate the sales and the requests for rentals. April was then in command of all quotes and contracts. The public who visited the lot detected the progress.

The good response from everyone was uplifting. Sales were on the rise, and the two attentive bosses were now back on track!

A Day with Grandma

Emma and her sister, Melissa, made plans to visit Grandma in Atlanta. Since the two gals wanted to get on their way before the traffic rush, they set their clocks to wake up early. They had bananas and a granola snack. Then, they fed the family pets before they set off on their long trip across the state.

The drive to Atlanta was full of splendid things. The abundant red hills were impressive, and Emma thought they should look at the beautiful landscape for a while. However, Melissa reminded her about their plan to spend the entire day with Grandma. Extra stops on their drive would only make them late!

It was almost nine a.m. when they pulled up to Grandma's small house. Grandma was a tall thin woman with a kind smile. She met Emma and Melissa on the front step with hugs for both of them.

The three women were so much alike! They spent the day talking about all kinds of things. Grandma made sure Emma and Melissa had plenty of snacks. Before long, it was time to go home. Emma and Melissa told Grandma that they would be back to spend another day with her very soon.

Mojo, the Dog Who Digs

Mojo was a good family dog. However, to pass the time, Mojo would dig one hole after another. His owner, Logan, would come home from work every day and find holes all over his land. This would both amaze and upset Logan. Since Mojo was not aware that this upset his owner, he kept up his instinctive habit. But soon it was evident that something had to be done about all the holes!

Early one day, Logan had a thought. He had many beautiful pines on his land. Each spring, he would plant more pines to sell to families to landscape around their homes. He could use Mojo's holes to help him plant more pines! He was positive that this was a good way to benefit from Mojo's holes.

When it was time to plant the pines, Logan did not have to dig any holes at all. He could just put the small plants in the holes dug by Mojo. The dog was unaware of the gift he had given Logan. Logan's land became even more beautiful, and he was sure that he had the best pet!

Off to the Academy

Benny and Abraham are identical twin siblings who live in Alaska. Soon, they will be finishing school. In fact, they are ending classes early to begin a special program. In April, they will be attending an academy together where they will study politics. The academy is way on the other side of the state and miles from their family. The academy is beautiful, hidden among the Alaskan landscape of big sky and tall pines. The habitat is also rich with wildlife - bats, fish, foxes, and whales!

At the academy, Benny and Abraham will share a small and cozy room just like they do back home. Unlike at home, they will have to behave like adults and put up with all the strict rules.

Since they know they will get hungry and the menu at the academy does not look so good, Benny and Abraham plan to shop before they go. They plan to bring along packs of candy, jugs of coconut water, bagels, and boxes of jelly donuts. They will also get a sofa that can recline and blankets so their friends will have a spot to sit when they come to visit. Benny will take his instruments for music classes, and Abraham will take his baseball stuff.

Benny and Abraham are so happy to be sticking together at the academy. They are not just siblings, they are also the very best of friends!

A Chinchilla for Melissa PART ONE

Since Melissa was a just a small child, she wanted a pet. However, her family did not live in a very big home, and her mother and father were unsure about owning a pet. But, Melissa did not give up her quest. Almost every day she found a way to beg and even demand that her request be met.

One day, Melissa's lamenting paid off. Her mother responded by asking Melissa what kind of pet she wanted. Melissa was quick to say, "A chinchilla!"

Melissa's mother was at a loss. She said, "What is a chinchilla? I have never heard of such a pet!"

Melissa defended herself, "Well, I am not sure, but I do know that they are cute, and I want one."

“Hmm,” began her mother, “I think that if you want a chinchilla, you should know all about them first.”

Melissa knew she could not manipulate her mother anymore, so she set off to find out everything there was to know about chinchillas. Soon, she would be a pro on the topic.

A Chinchilla for Melissa PART TWO

Melissa was in a jam. She had been quick to advocate for a pet, but she had neglected to prepare to house one. She could not state the facts to her family. So, Melissa began to study the life of a chinchilla. She went online and began to write down all the facts.

It was astonishing to Melissa to find out early on that a chinchilla is a small rodent. They are often kept as pets, yet chinchillas can jump almost five feet into the air. They have dense, ultra-soft fur. She had also been unaware that baby chinchillas are called kits. Melissa did not stop until she felt she had enough facts to once again propose her request for such a pet.

Melissa spoke to her parents and listed all there was to know about owning a chinchilla. She commented that chinchillas like to snack on twigs and grass as they sit on their hind legs. Melissa's mother and father learned that since their fur used to be in demand, the chinchillas are now extinct in some parts of the world.

It would take a lot of work to care for a chinchilla. They require dust baths and must live where there is a lot of shade. In the end, her mother and father told Melissa that her study of the chinchilla was impressive. They felt that she now had the wisdom to care for one.

At last! Melissa would get her pet!

Anna on Skates PART ONE

Anna has been on skates since she was almost four years old. She has spent most of her days at the rink. Anna and her family had to dedicate themselves to this sport early on in her life. She now skates at the top competitive level and is in first-rate shape. Her objective is to skate in the World Finals.

Anna is both athletic and talented, and she has an intensive work ethic. She also has to be optimistic and confident about her ability to win. Anna has a right to be confident because her act has all the most difficult elements. She captivates the people in the stands, and it is a thrill to see her skate.

In the fall, Anna makes the World Finals team, so now it is more important than ever for her to prepare. The prospect of a gold medal inspires her. So much will depend on the last event - the long program. A drastic mistake or even a small slip will impact the result.

Anna on Skates PART TWO

At the finals, Anna has one last skate to try to win the gold. She goes into the event with a positive attitude. Her music has a fast tempo, and the fans clap as she glides across the rink. Her landing leg is solid when she executes her axel and flip jumps. She is elegant! The fans adore her as she finishes her program with a pivot of her skates and a divine camel spin.

Anna has done her best and soon the scores come in. She has won the gold medal! Anna shakes hands with her opponents from Finland and China. She compliments them on their fantastic programs.

Then, Anna almost begins to cry as she gives a big wave to the jubilant fans in the stands. When the press comes by, Anna thanks her family and friends. She hopes to always recall this uncommon moment in her life.